(Pariah Definition of the Advanced Cambridge Dictionary and Thesaurus from Cambridge University) What does the house really mean to me? For me, the home means not one, but many things. More importantly, I believe that the house means a safe and cheerful place where you are respected and loved. But what about people without houses? Does the same thing mean to them? Everyone deserves to know the true meaning of home. When I started writing this essay, I did not think much about the meaning of home. But now, I discovered that the house means more. A lot more. House means a pleasant and happy place where you can live, laugh and learn. Af state somewhere where you are loved, respected and cared. When you look abroad, the house is just a house. A Property. Maybe a yard. But inside, it is much more than wood and bricks. The saying "home is where the heart is," he says. Casa also is where your memories lie. House is where I have my head stuck under the sofa. House is where I fall into the golden pond. I remember sleeping in the theater, falling the stairs and climbing the apple tree. Without souvenirs, most people would not be the people who are today. Just like the memories, the home is also where your hopes are and dreams. Dreaming when you grow up. Being a space or a firefighter. Sinking under the sea as a diver. I could not imagine living without dreams. My house will have them, and without a house, I would have none. There are, however, people without homes, living on the streets and homeless shelters. Not much is very fair about some people living in huge, glorious and bright white mansions and others living heaped and wet, in small boxes of paper. There are 2.2 billion children in the world. Half of these children live in poverty and are homeless. Did you know that in my own province, British Columbia, a homeless person dies every 12 days? Imagine this: a man, sitting on a corner, watching people with extravagant clothes and overflowing shopping bags without care in the world. He does not have a house, so what does the house mean to him? He lives at that street corner. No memories, no hopes, no dreams. Maybe even without the chance to live. There are many ways to help poverty, the main cause of housing. You can buy from second hand, withstand charities or even collect donations. Although I have not done so yet, I want to challenge myself. I would also like to challenge you. There is no meaning for the word at home. If you're lucky enough to have one, what does it mean for you? This is for you to decide. Página 2 My house is my house, it is not the house of Napoleo± What is the place where I like to sleep and allows me to enter my thoughts in deep My house is like a closet giant that I can even set up my tent everything can be tidy or confused and we can cook because of the electriclity my house is a cozy place my friends and neighbors visit from time to time my family is here with me our house is my joy my home is more than a shelter is more than a shelter. á "e sa place where I play and laugh my room is private I can really relax my house, I can not live without it I could not bear to be homeless and insecure who does not know where to go my house to © a need toys, I could give my house it is expensive as my mother and my father say that my home is a real gift! I would like everyone to be beautiful for everyone on earth here to God, this is my prayer. Page 3 Just a few meters from me, I see a beautiful house where there are all my joys, my sorrows and nightmares. Without any hesitation, I jumped in a crazy race. I stretch my fingers to the door. I finally opened. Inside I say to myself, everything is hot and beautiful. I think without all these wonderful rooms, I would be sleeping on a blanket of mud, rock and asphalt. An It's a place where you feel safe. Everyone has a different house. This is the only place where I can feel free and pacific. I think of people who Your infancy had a roof and now, they do not! Life brings us obstacles to overcome and, my greatest desire in the world is that I wouldnÁ € t have to go through it. We want to save the planet, collecting can-guides, bread labels and used batteries. Without home, we could do not even drink or eat at a table. No shelter, he could not even sleep or watch TV in a cozy bed. All these small needs of everyday life are achievable, if we all have a cozy place, where all feelings are possible. No house, we'll be dying. The cold and the wind let people leave in another world where evil and cold are meaningless. They are certainly floating clouds just above us. My dream is that everyone has a cherished house and doesna is a given acquired. I hope all those who are reading this, I feel lucky to have at least one room that will never forget. The planet Earth is not always a home of welcome, even in warmer countries. Pollution worries me. Together we can make the difference. I hope someone will do something to help us save the poor. Thank you to all the people you will read this message, and help us save the homeless worldwide. Not confident sources á € á € á €
